

A Special Note

from Laurie Marks Vincent

To The Ends of The Earth . . .

It was in late 2008 when I was last in touch with Bobby Michaels. We had been sharing missionary opportunities and he was excited about what God was doing in my ministry. The last email that he sent me encouraged me to go for it and spread the Gospel with my music wherever the Lord took me, feed the hungry, physically and spiritually. He had impacted and encouraged me so much that I felt I had the wings to fly to Cambodia on my own, never mind the use of AirCanada.

Bobby was a former music artist signed to Word Records. After he was no longer with Word Records, his heart grew for mission work and he called himself a "musicianary". He started "Musicianaries International" and did concerts for missions, taking his music to places where the Gospel needed to be preached. He provided teaching at pastors seminars in these countries to encourage them and passed out rice bags to feed the hungry. His life could be summed up by saying, that he poured love on hurting people, where they have so little but need Jesus most of all.

In March of 2009, Bobby and his wife Lee were teaching at a pastor's seminar in Cambodia, where Bobby suffered a heart attack. The news sent me to my knees in prayer. He was moved to Bangkok where he suffered three more heart attacks after surgery. Ten days later, March 31, 2009, the Lord took Bobby home. I've never mourned so hard for someone that I had never met. His heart was evident in his emails to me. He loved what he was doing, he loved the God that he was doing it for, and he loved the people that needed to know Jesus.

Since then I have never been able to personally see provision for a mission trip that I could participate in, but with my heart, I can feel every longing that Bobby had to reach the lost that he had come to love so much. With this yearning still within me, it was only a matter of time until the message wove its way through the songs that I write and eventually became the whole theme for a new recording entitled "Tell The Story".
